

After the successful flight of the Silver Dart, Glenn Curtiss left the team to continue looking after his engine company in Hammondsport, New York.

Bell motivated McCurdy and Baldwin to continue the work on flying machines. The two men decided to start their own company, the Canadian Aerodrome Company.

Your task is to write a letter to the Canadian government to pitch your new invention, the Baddeck 1, in hopes that it will be purchased by the military.